Rivers, Creeks and Everywhere in Between

by Judith Anderson
opens March 2 and runs through April 30.

As a child Judith lived along a river in New Jersey and spent a great deal of time walking the river, playing in the forest and looking at nature. She found it so peaceful compared to the bustle of city life. At that time, she did not know that she would fall in love with the beauty of the outdoors--the way the light plays on the water or rides up the side of a tree. When the weather was cold she would sit at the kitchen table for hours and draw the river and forest across from her family's home.

That's how it started for Judith--being curious about the flow of light on an object, the chroma, temperature and abstract shapes all coming together as a whole to form what we see as art. She started sketching and drawing, but after many years found her heart's desire was painting.

Judith is a Plein Aire painter who finds painting outdoors refreshing and tranquil. It also allows her to enjoy the beauty of the rivers, creeks, trails, fields and woods around her. These landmarks become new and exciting subjects during the changes between each season, and she appreciates her good fortune during each day spent among them. Judith's goal is to engage her viewer--holding their gaze for a moment so they can see the beauty that she has seen. She finds beauty in all things and hopes you enjoy looking at her work as much as she enjoyed creating it.
